

Sean Reilly

Lab4

Describe how you tested your program

I used different combinations of numbers within the file1.txt and file2.txt to make sure that it could compute different numbers. It worked with some number combinations but not with others. Not really sure what the problem was. It did create the output file every time though so I was happy with that. Some other tests I did were the constant in the beginning of the program and sectioning off parts of code to make sure it worked. I think I may have missed in the readings a key function that was needed to complete this one adequately.